PENNSYLVANIA COLLEGE OF TECHNOLOGY became an affiliate of The Pennsylvania State University in 1989 after establishing a national reputation for education supporting workforce development, first as a technical institute and later as a community college. Today, Penn College is a special mission affiliate of Penn State, committed to applied technology education. In addition, Penn College manages the state's largest worker-training program through Workforce Development & Continuing Education. The modern Penn College campus offers students hands-on instruction and access to the latest equipment, leading to excellent graduate placement and degrees that work.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

The people of Williamsport had much to celebrate when a new high school building opened in November 1914. A dedication program spelled out the building's destiny to "contribute to the eternal well-being of all who enter its doors."

The opening of that building – today's Klump Academic Center – marked the opening scene of a story that continues into a new century. From our vantage point, we see how a promise of the past is fulfilled as we serve those who enter the open doors of Pennsylvania College of Technology.

Celebrating the institution's Centennial in 2014 provided an opportunity for us to relive our most important memories, to reminisce and to rekindle old friendships – bringing to mind the adage originated by Welsh composer Joseph Parry: "Make new friends, but keep the old; Those are silver, these are gold."

As many alumni and former leaders returned to the campus to celebrate the Centennial, we were reminded of how their influence is alive today. As many provided gifts to support our scholarship campaign, we realized how their contributions have shaped – and will continue to shape – the institution's character for years to come.

As we grow, our mission to serve students remains as vital as it was in 1914.

New friends also joined in the celebration, as we gratefully accepted funds to create 25 new scholarships and 46 new or expanded relationships with industry. Just as we stand strong thanks to our longtime friends of gold, we rise even higher as we nurture new relationships to strengthen our services for the future. As our relationships grow, we are able to offer more and better services to our students – scholarships, access to advanced equipment and technology, field trips, guest lectures, internships – and full-time employment for graduates.

As we grow, our mission to serve students remains as vital as it was in 1914. Following the legacy of Williamsport High School's vocational-technical program, Williamsport Technical Institute and Williamsport Area Community College, Penn College prepares graduates for success, equipping them with "degrees that work."

Throughout the Centennial, as we reflected on our many transitions – changing names, changing leadership and staffing, and expanding from diplomas and certificates to associate and baccalaureate degrees – we celebrated both old and new and held fast to our commitment to our students.

As we close the chapter on our first 100 years, we also write the prologue to the next 100. The challenges we meet today prepare us to overcome the tests of tomorrow. Keeping an eye toward the future and securing the resources we need to respond to emerging workforce needs, we build the foundation for our students' successes in careers we cannot yet imagine.

I invite you to pause a moment with me to reflect on our history, our students and our mission ... and to consider how we can work together to chart a course for our future as a national leader in applied technology education.

IN COLLEGE HISTORY

1914

A new Williamsport High School opens. It includes a small industrial arts shop offering woodworking and machining.

1918

A full-time adult day school and an evening industrial school are established at the high school. Pattern making, automotive and electrical courses are added. Students include World War I veterans, many of them disabled.

1924

George H. Parkes becomes the second director of the school district's vocational education program. William K. Yocum was the first.

1931

As the effects of the Great Depression reach Williamsport, a survey of local industries reveals that although unemployment is rising, there is a shortage of skilled workers. With local industries and agencies, the school develops a plan to screen, train and place unemployed workers to fill those shortages. "The Williamsport Plan" gains national acclaim. (See 1940.)

1932

To remedy a shortage of truck drivers, the high school borrows trucks to begin one of the first driving courses in the United States.

1933

The school collaborates with the Works Progress Administration to train men and youth through the nation's Civilian Conservation Corps and National Youth Administration to help combat the effects of the Depression.

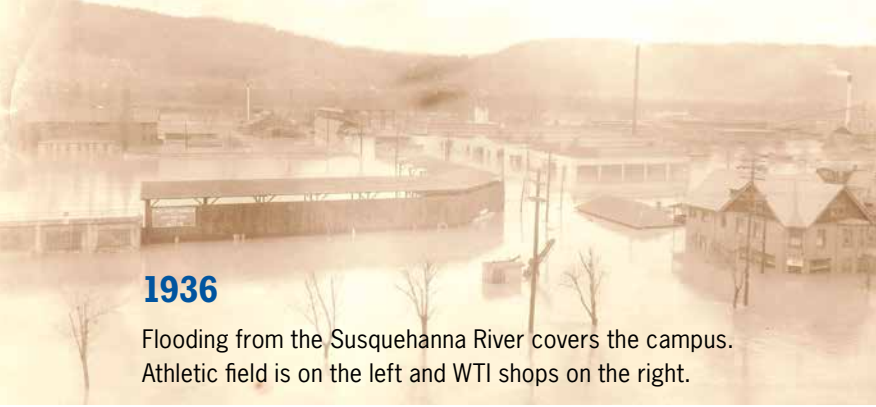

With the school in need of a new machine shop and local families in need of food, Parkes secures public works funding to offer food baskets to volunteers who help to build the shop's foundation.

1935

Industrial shops are moved to new units on Susquehanna Street. A wing is added to the high school building.

1936

Flooding from the Susquehanna River covers the campus. Athletic field is on the left and WTI shops on the right.

1937

A new gymnasium, built through the Works Progress Administration, is dedicated.

POWERED BY LYCOMING

1940

As war escalates in Europe, Williamsport is among the first schools to adapt a vocational program to meet war needs. Defense industry training operates 24 hours per day, seven days per week.

An article in The Saturday Evening Post says of "The Williamsport Plan" (1931) to retrain the unemployed: "What the Depression did to Williamsport was about what it did to most similarly placed industrial communities. ... But what Williamsport did to the Depression is a story in the best, though of late unofficial, American tradition." Reader's Digest, Woman's Day and Ladies' Home Journal also spotlighted the efforts.

1941

Williamsport Technical Institute is officially founded, merging high school vocational and adult education programs. Parkes is named the first director.

Verna Paulhamus, '41, places the first window tile in the WTI aviation center at the regional airport in Montoursville. Plans for the center were among her class assignments as an architectural drafting student. Paulhamus earned $24 a month through the National Youth Administration to attend classes. She lived with her parents in Loyalsock Township but recalls many NYA students came from Pennsylvania's coal regions and were housed in Sylvan Dell and Haleeka campground on Lycoming Creek Road. Each day, a pickup truck brought lunch to the other NYA students: bread donated by Stroehmann's bakery, along with bologna and bananas.

Paulhamus, '41, visits campus in 2013.

1942

Williamsport School District purchases a structure across the street from the high school to serve as WTI's administrative headquarters. Built in 1913, it was used as a trolley car barn for the Williamsport Railway Co.

Early 1940s

According to Melvin Durrwachter, '43, who donated the photo, these women rotated through WTI's laboratories, spending two weeks in each to learn various trades. After completing their rotations, they traveled the country to inspect war plants. First row, second from left, is Melvin's sister Viola Durrwachter, '41. First row, seventh from left, is Kate Kline.

1943

“World War II had broken out, and for our special contributions to the war effort, members of the class revived and restored older, in-storage airplanes for various pilot-training programs. One was a Pilgrim cargo aircraft. Following restoration, it was flown by one of the rising breed of bush pilots that was moving into Alaska.”

Girard L. Calehuff, '43, aircraft mechanics
Rochester, Minn.

1952

Kenneth E. Carl, a 1931 alumnus who later joined the drafting faculty, becomes the institute's next director. When the institute became WACC, he would continue as its first president.

1956

The Williamsport Chamber of Commerce uses WTI as a selling point to attract industry.

1945

“WTI was the best technical institute in the country at the time. Chinese leader Chiang Kai-shek sent military advisers to WTI for study.”

Howard C. Aderhold, '46, radio communications
Montoursville

1946

A second flood inundates the shops along Susquehanna Street. Faculty member and administrator James P. Bressler recalled traveling in a rowboat to the shops. “We saw fish swimming in and out of the windows,” he said.

1954

“The importance of attention to detail was learned in a two-week class on ‘How to Get a Job.’ It was probably the worst class I ever attended – at least I thought so at the time. For three hours a day, for two weeks, we learned that when applying for a job which required dungarees, you should wear clean ones; if you must cross your legs, make sure your socks are neat, not an old rolled-down pair; and even if you don’t get the job, write and thank the interviewer. This went on and on. Several months later, I was ready for the business world. (After being turned down for the exact job I wanted) I sat down and wrote a letter thanking the two interviewers by name for the time spent. ... I assume no sooner than the letter was read, I was offered my first real professional job – the same one I interviewed for.”

Walter Klocko, '57, technical illustration
Middletown

1951

WTI begins the nation's first comprehensive Vocational Diagnostic Program, determining the abilities of individuals with physical challenges and training them for appropriate careers. Hundreds of disabled United Mine Workers were among the participants in this nationally recognized program.

1959

“I had an office management class taught by Mr. William Homisak. One day, I had to think of a subject, put a title to it, research the subject, type the information on a stencil, run the stencil on a copy machine. I had four sheets of paper, so I typed four stencils, put it together and presented the subject to the class of 30 adults. The subject was ‘How to Study and Take Notes.’ I still have a copy of it today.”

Patricia Alexander, '60, secretary
Williamsport

“One day, me and some school chums took my clunker down to one of the nearby streams to rinse off the dirt. It was a very shallow section that we chose to drive on. We got out to some small rocks and washed off the car. As we went to drive back to the bank, the car got stuck in some very loose stones. Someone suggested that the auto shop teacher had an old Army ‘duck.’ The teacher came to our rescue, and his ‘duck’ pulled my old '49 Chevy out of the stream. I never tried that routine again!”

Robert C. Lambertus, '59, production illustration
King, N.C.

1960

V. Wallace "Wally" Centi, '60, recalls the words of his construction instructor Mason Wagner: "Let those who follow me build with the plumb of honor, the level of truth, the square of integrity." Like many of his classmates, he worked for J.K. Rishel Furniture, earning $1 an hour.

1965

WTI transitions to Williamsport Area Community College.

1966

The first issue of Spotlight, the student newspaper, debuts on Feb. 23. The paper was published through April 1987.

The college fields its first varsity team – men's basketball – with an active roster of 15 men coached by Bill Burdett. It marked the birth of the "Wildcats" nickname.

1963

Pennsylvania enacts the Community College Act. Carl was influential. "Anyone familiar with Ken Carl and his writing will at once see his philosophy spelled out in most of the lines of the act," Parkes later said.

The college's first computer, an IBM 1620 Data Processing Unit, is installed in Unit 6.

While attending WTI, Marlyn Stauffer and four roommates rented a furnished apartment on Fourth Street for $50 a month, plus utilities. Since none of his buddies could cook or clean, they came up with a bargain: Instead of paying rent, Stauffer handled the housekeeping. He attended second-shift classes and worked a six-hour day shift at Weldon's to help pay his tuition.

"George Wolfe (instructor of computer science) was very good at his profession, but he was also such an understanding man. He never got angry when any of us asked him a question, no matter what it was. He had such a wonderful personality, and I remember him smiling quite a lot."

Stephen Craft, '65, engineering and design data processing technology Monroe, N.C.

WACC establishes a library separate from the high school, leasing space in a former Laundromat at 1223 W. Fourth St. Two years later, the WACC library moves again, into the Rishel Building, left, at 1201 W. Third St.

"I became one of the first cheerleaders at the school; our hours for liberal arts began at 4 p.m. after the high school had been dismissed. It was so unique, and we loved the entire two years."

Carol (Grantier) Rechel, '68, liberal arts Muncy

1967
Neil Diamond and the New York Subway perform for Fall Weekend.

1968

"I was co-supervising Memorial Park's summer program for school-aged children. My 'boyfriend,' Phil Landers, was completing his master's degree in business administration and had just had an interview for a teaching position at WACC. He came suit-dressed, straight from his interview and announced that he got the job and we could get married."

Gail B. Landers

retired group leader in Dunham Children's Learning Center (Phillip D. Landers is an emeritus professor of business administration/management)

1969

"Many of us were Mrs. Wheeler's boys, no dorms in those days; you either found an apartment or stayed in one of Mrs. Wheeler's boarding houses. A lot of us started there and then progressed to apartments in later semesters. She had several houses on Vine Avenue and a main house on Third Street where we all ate three square meals a day. Here and in our freshmen classes is where many new friendships began – students of many fields, all living together."

Donald Warner, '71, engineering drafting technology
Columbia Cross Roads

1970

WACC acquires the former high school and gymnasium when Williamsport Area High School secures land at 2990 W. Fourth St.

WACC earns its first accreditation from the Middle States Commission on Institutes of Higher Education.

The George H. Parkes Automotive Technology Center opens.

1971

A 409-acre facility for instruction in forestry, horticulture and other "earth sciences" opens near Allenwood.

"I drove a 1950 Chevy painted like an American flag. One day, my 'boyfriend' Jimmy Baier (graphic arts, '72, who is now my husband of almost 39 years) was waiting for me outside Unit 14 – the old Arrow Shirt Factory. He saw a policeman ticketing all the cars outside the building (it was a yellow curb), but when he came to my car and a VW Beetle (also painted like an American flag), he saluted each car and kept on going."

Mary Jane Baier, '72, clerk-typist, '03, office information systems information center clerk

Faculty pickets for an equitable salary system.

1973

Faculty begin a strike on Oct. 30.
Classes resume Nov. 19.

1974

William H. Feddersen is named WACC's second president.

1975

"I scaled the Klump Academic Center in the summer of 1975. I only made it to the second landing."

Michael J. McNamara, '76, horticulture
Toms River, N.J.

1979

Feddersen is at the state Capitol in Harrisburg when an accident occurs at the nearby Three Mile Island nuclear power plant. He remembers it as an "unsettling period of time" as Williamsport was an evacuation center for the incident. "It frightened many of the staff," he said. "Some actually left temporarily."

"I was in the last gym class to use (the football field behind Bardo Gym). Six backhoes were running the whole time, waiting for us to finish. Class was from 11 to noon, and by 12:30, they had scraped off all the topsoil."

Daniel L. Brooks, '80, architectural technology, '08, residential construction technology and management instructor, architectural technology

Students are hired for summer work to renovate the George S. Klump Academic Center with new paint, carpet, chairs and desks as the Rishel and Klump buildings are consolidated.

1980

Robert L. Breuder is named the third president of WACC.

"I was in a Principles of Business class in the Academic Center. I dropped my pencil, and the guy in front of me bent down at the same time to pick it up. We bumped heads, laughed and both bent down again. He was one of the first friends I met at WACC. Ten years later we married, and we have three sons."

Vicki K. Killian, dining services manager III

Two big acts headline Spring Weekend.

1981

"I will always remember sitting in the second-floor hallway of the Klump Academic Center waiting with friends for our computer programs (i.e., punch-card decks) to run. You were only allowed one submission per day, and it took a while. We computer science majors had so many conversations about life, our dreams and 'conquering the world' while we waited. Thanks, Dave Lott (lab operator), for sneaking in an extra run now and then for some brownies!"

Joette Sierle, '81, computer science technology academic services specialist

Three new buildings are dedicated: the Learning Resources Center, the Kenneth E. Carl Building Trades Center and the Avco-Lycoming Metal Trades Center.

1982

“I wanted to be a social studies teacher, and the class I knew I would like the most (and I was absolutely sure that I would ‘knock out of the park’) was American National Government.

“After taking the first test, however, I was disappointed to discover that I had earned a grade of ‘C.’ Professor G. Robert Kissell told the class that no one had done especially well, and that each of us should meet with him.

“When I sat down with him, we reviewed each of the questions that I had missed. As we were wrapping up our meeting, I expressed my thanks and let him know that my performance had initially made me wonder whether I had what it took to become a social studies teacher. Kissell gave one of his classic sports analogies: ‘You know, just because a rookie football player has a bad first game, it doesn’t mean he won’t ultimately be a Heisman Trophy winner.’ After taking a moment to look at his gradebook, he smiled and said, ‘Well, it looks like the highest grade in the class on this one was a ‘C,’ and a student by the name of McCoy got it. I think you’ll be fine; just be more careful.’

“Even now, I can’t help but smile as I recall his reply and the generosity of spirit that came with it.”

Steven K. McCoy, '84, general studies academic skills specialist

1983

The college acquires a former elementary school near Wellsboro to serve the Northern Tier.

1984

The Henry G. Hager Lifelong Education Center is dedicated.

1985

Dozens gather to watch as the brick smokestacks of Unit 6 – “The Trolley Barn” – are razed. Their demolition marks a new period of growth.

Regional school districts choose not to renew their 20-year sponsorship contract, jeopardizing the future of the community college, which was required by law to maintain local sponsorship. The city of Williamsport agrees to act as temporary sponsor.

1987

The John F. Thompson Professional Development Center and Robert L. Breuder Advanced Technology and Health Sciences Center open.

Poet and novelist Maya Angelou offers a lecture in the Academic Center as part of the college's Women's Series.

1989

Gov. Robert P. Casey signs legislation transforming WACC into Pennsylvania College of Technology, a wholly owned subsidiary of Penn State.

A grant from the National Science Foundation prompts development of the Technology Transfer Center, now known as Workforce Development & Continuing Education.

1990

Penn College demonstrates its “factory of the future” – a complete Computer Integrated Manufacturing process. The event is believed to be the first time an American college achieved such a demonstration.

1991

The first issue of One College Avenue magazine is published.

1992

Penn College offers its first bachelor's degrees. The first was earned in 1993 by John G. Upcraft, left, who later joined the Penn College faculty.

1993

The Kathryn Wentzel Lumley Aviation Center, Alvin C. Bush Campus Center and Community Arts Center open.

1994

The Plastics Manufacturing Center opens to serve one of the nation's fastest-growing industries. Known today as the Plastics Innovation & Resource Center, its seminars attract participants from around the globe.

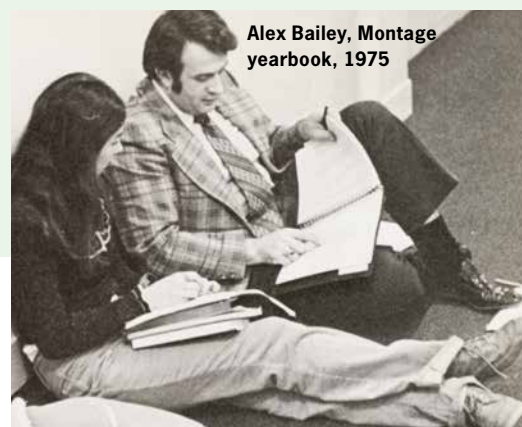

"For years during Spring Open House, the students of the plastics department built, launched and attempted to track a polyethylene blown-film balloon. Photo shows Eric Murray, '96, plastics and polymer engineering technology, launching the 1994 Open House balloon. It was common to have a letter from the students and a gift certificate to Le Jeune Chef Restaurant as the payload."

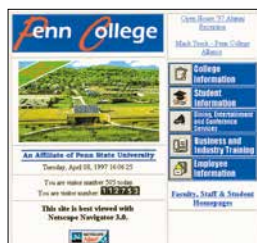

Tim Weston
associate professor of plastics technology

"I don't think I've ever met anyone else who prepared me more for 'the real world' than professor Alex Bailey did. He was strict about attendance and punctuality. He believed in having fun, but not at the expense of learning. He rewarded hard work. He would help if you needed it, but not give you a free ride, and expected you to be serious about catching up. There's not a day that goes by that I don't use something that he taught me."

Northumberland

1995

www.pct.edu is launched.

1997

The first residence hall, The Village at Penn College, opens.

"I was a member of the inaugural group of Penn College Ambassadors with Chet Schuman, director of admissions, as our guide. We were the first public group to ever be hosted at the Victorian House. We attended a formal dinner with then-President Dr. Breuder."

Nathaniel Wright, '97, graphic communications
Elizabethtown

"In my freshman year, professor Nancy Bowers suggested that I apply to be an in-class tutor for developmental math. I was surprised, amazed and even somewhat dumbfounded by her suggestion. Not only was I a nontraditional student who had been out of high school for over 10 years, but I also believed that math wasn't 'my thing.' Despite my self-doubt, I applied and was hired as an in-class tutor. I found that I loved helping others as professor Bowers had helped me. But more importantly, her belief in me encouraged me to believe in myself, and from that point forward, I was less afraid to step outside of my comfort zone."

Wendy Miller, '03, technical and professional communication director of academic services

1998

Davie Jane Gilmour, chief academic officer and a former member of the dental hygiene faculty, is named president.

“Walking across stage during my graduation in May of 1998 at the age of 34 and thinking about everything I have accomplished by receiving a higher education, and how proud my family was of me, the only child out of seven kids who graduated from college. It’s the one memory I will never forget here at Penn College; I never thought I would do it, but I did.”

Lisa J. Caputo, '98, office information systems secretary to the School of Construction & Design Technologies

The Advanced Automotive Technology Center opens.

1999

The last train runs through campus on March 31.

CHRIS COOLEY, THE WILD STUDIO

The college dedicates the Field House, built by students, and the main entrance.

2001

Penn College begins sharing news online through PCToday.

“It certainly isn’t my favorite moment, but I will remember it forever. I went to Sociology class on the morning of Sept. 11, 2001, and remember all of the talk of something going on in New York, but no specifics of what it was or why. I had woken up and never turned on the TV or radio that morning, but when I returned from class, I immediately turned on the TV and watched as the second plane hit. I sat in my apartment right across from the campus with the door open and just watched helplessly as it unfolded. It was one of the worst days in the history of our country, and when someone asks me where I was at that moment, it takes me right back to Williamsport.”

Wilson Hannold III, '02, automotive technology management
Pilesgrove, N.J.

“(I was working in a factory when) a group of workers was called into a meeting. We were told that each of us would be permanently laid off. I found out that I qualified for a program to go to college, since my job was sent out of the country, but I was not sure that I could make it through college at this time in my life.

“One day I decided to call Penn College, and the voice on the other end was so encouraging. I will never forget it. I contemplated for days: Could I do this? After three phone calls to the same woman, she convinced me that I could.

“I will always remember being connected to the voice at the other end from Penn College. The voice encouraging me was Mary Jane Baier (information center clerk).”

To address emerging natural gas industry needs, Penn College teams with Penn State Cooperative Extension to form the Marcellus Shale Education & Training Center. It was renamed the Shale Training & Education Center in 2012 to reflect its expansion into other regions.

Greek Life is introduced with four fraternities and two sororities.

The college launches its social-networking presence on Facebook. Soon to follow was the college's first official "tweet" on Jan. 21, 2010.

"Growing up, I had never really been away from home. I was hesitant to go away to school. When I came to visit campus, I knew immediately that it was the college for me. I wasn't as confident when it came time for Welcome Weekend. There were numerous moments when I contemplated moving back home. In the midst of my struggles, I immersed myself in extracurricular activities. My involvement was a way to work through my homesickness. I wasn't looking for accolades. I was looking for support.

"That is why I was so surprised when I was named the Student Leader of the Year. I was nominated with so many other deserving individuals. In that moment, I realized that the people of Penn College had restored my confidence and helped me grow into a person who could help others through their challenges."

Mark R. Capellazzi, '09, culinary arts and systems admissions representative

2010

"When Snooki came to the college, I was asked to get on stage with her, and I was incredibly happy, not because I got to meet Snooki, but because I was finally taller than someone."

The college dedicates Dauphin Hall and rededicates the renovated Parkes Automotive Technology Center, Avco-Lycoming Metal Trades Center and Hager Lifelong Education Center.

"In 2007 when I started, Dauphin Hall was just a parking lot. Over the course of my four years as a student, I was able to see it being built. I remember thinking, 'I wonder what it will look like, and who will live there.' Little did I know I would be living there my last year, as the building's first Senior Resident Assistant. I remember helping move furniture, getting keys ready, and before I knew it, students were arriving. Today, walking to Dauphin Hall brings back all the good memories of my last year at college. Some of the best times I had at college were either in or with other students who lived in Dauphin!"

2012

A retired Boeing 727-200F aircraft, given by FedEx Express, becomes the largest single equipment donation in the college's history.

2013

"While I was teaching, a student suffered an apparent seizure. Three students exemplified leadership and compassion under pressure. They reached the student before I did and quickly began supporting him to prevent further injury and taking his vitals. Their actions and prompt response were commended by the health care professionals when they arrived.

"I have seen many Penn College students step up and assist others without hesitation. This was one such example that made me proud of our student body."

Paul R. Watson

dean of academic services and first year programs

"My third week at Penn College, I was walking back to my dorm from my last class for the day. A student who was in one of my other classes was walking far in front of me. A group of guys pulled up in their car beside me. They were asking me a lot of questions, and I must have looked uncomfortable. The familiar classmate walked the whole way back to me and the car to make sure I was all right. This simple act made me feel like there really are kind people out there. This classmate, who I had barely said more than two words to before, has become one of my closest friends here at Penn College, and I will never forget that moment."

2014

"I will always remember one morning in my Mathematics in Non-European Cultures class (a course that includes a study-abroad experience), waking up before the crack of dawn, hiking all the way to the top of Temple IV in Tikal (a Mayan archaeological site in Guatemala), watching and listening to all the creatures of the jungle wake up as the sun rose."

Manufacturing Students Place Third

Approximately 100 colleges and 1,100 students globally competed at Baja SAE-Kansas, conducted in late May at Pittsburg State University. The SAE competition required students to design and build off-road cars to be tested in various categories. Penn College met the challenge in the four-hour endurance race. The students' dune buggy-like vehicle completed 52 laps over a rugged 1.5-mile course to finish third, the highest ranking in the college's nine-year history at the event, resulting in a $500 award. The team consisted of six students from Penn College's chapter of the Society of Manufacturing Engineers.

Mechatronics Major Accepts First Students

The mechatronics engineering technology major was implemented in Fall 2013 as a result of industry's request for qualified electro-mechanical technicians who can work in today's heavily automated industrial environment. As part of a $14.9 million grant from the U.S. Department of Labor, Penn College and three other colleges have built high-tech labs and developed curriculum to train these highly skilled technicians.

VA Approves ShaleNET

The Department of Veterans Affairs approved ShaleNET's noncredit Roustabout, Floorhand and Welder's Helper certificate-training courses for veterans who are eligible under a VA training assistance program. Each of the courses prepares participants for work in the oil and natural gas industry.

ALUMNI GIVING HIGHLIGHTS

Next Centennial Scholarship

The Penn College Foundation offered a matching gift program in 2013-14. The Foundation made a $250 gift in the name of each first-time alumni donor who gave a gift of $25 or greater. Combined, those gifts were used this fall to create a one-time scholarship for a student enrolled in the graduate's major.

184 first-year students received scholarships because of this initiative!

72/72 Challenge

To generate excitement about alumni giving, we launched an online giving challenge called 72/72 – with a goal of acquiring 72 new alumni donors in 72 hours via Facebook. Featuring a parody of late-night infomercials designed to elicit laughs, the social media campaign was a success, and as a result, 75 new alumni donors came on board.
